

This presented gradual thesis deal with problems connected with research projects provided by nurses in cooperation with doctors on Coronary Intensive Unit in the IKEM hospital Praha. The exact name of this thesis is – Ethics of clinical research provided in intensive care by nurses. This thesis is composed from two parts – theoretical and practical. Theoretical part is divided into the seven parts. The first chapter describe a develop of relationship between the doctor and patient which is very important especially during the research studies.

The second chapter is focus on problems of informed consent area. Describe its historical development and process its standardization in big hospitals. The third chapter contain an information about ethical committee and its role in medical researches. Fourth chapter contain some information about development and changes in documents important in research area. Nursing as a area for research is mentioned and discuss in five part of this thesis together with supervision which is very important in research too.

Part six try to solve a problems connected with competention of nurses in the Czech republic in research area. The last seven part try to explain the meaning of some research studies, which are actually running on Coronary Department in the IKEM Praha hospital.

Practical part in more details describe the results of two researchs process which was realized on Coronary departmen in the IKEM hospital. Is divided in two parts. The first part present the results of my own quantitative research, second part describe the results of my own qualitative research.

The end of this thesis contain some recommendation following with summary and appendices.